

how to cancel an AirAsia flight and get a refund

When planning a trip, the only thing you hope for is that it will not be canceled. But how often has a planned trip with pals been canceled? So, if you almost thought your trip was on track since you booked with Air Asia and now you're reading this blog.

This blog will show you how to cancel tickets stepwise. It will also tell you how much the cancellation fees will be based on when you cancel your tickets.

How to cancel your AirAsia tickets and then apply for a refund:

- Only the official website of Air Asia has the AirAsia cancellation policy, so make sure you only go to the official website, which is www.airasia.co.in.
- You should be aware that only the official website has the right to cancel a ticket booked with Air Asia, so be wary of being misled by any other website.
- The word "manage" is placed in a very small font at the top left corner of the main website. When you click that, you'll be asked to provide your PNR number and last name.

- This is a required step because the website uses it to verify that you are a passenger who has purchased a ticket.
- When you type it, you'll be taken to a screen where you can put "cancellation and refund." The aircraft firm will begin the process after you click on that.
- The points listed above should answer your query about "how to cancel AirAsia flight and get a refund."
- Also, if you want to figure out how much of a penalty you'll have to pay, go to:
